Leading a Respectful Workplace: How to Prevent Harassment

With sexual harassment in the news on a weekly basis lately, it's more important than ever to take preventative steps to protect your employees and your business. We'll talk about why you must address harassment prevention now and share some proactive steps to take immediately in your quest to ensure a respectful workplace. But harassment prevention is not a "one and done" activity, and for it to work effectively it must be part of an ongoing initiative. We'll also discuss how to develop a blended learning program that incorporates multiple styles of learning with time between activities, spread out over time. During the workshop component of this session, we'll work together to identify potential components to leverage in your blended learning programs, practice writing scenario-based exams, and create some sample practice activities for your learners.
